The Holy Terror H. G. Wells

The Holy Terror presents itself as a biography of Rudolf "Rud" Whitlow, who is born with such an aggressive temperament that scarcely is he born but his monthly nurse exclaims: "It's a Holy Terror!" Rud Whitlow goes on to become the founder of the first world state, long a Wellsian dream.

The Holy Terror is divided into four books. The events of Book One take place in the recognizable recent English past, though it should be noted that Wells warns that "Every person, place and thing in this story—even the countries in which it happens—are fictitious . . . The England, the America, the London in this book are not the England, America and London of geography and journalism, but England, America, and London transposed into imaginative narrative." With Book Two, the novel takes a futuristic turn and the action of the novel extends into the early 1950s.
